The Late Col. C. E. Stuart—Eulogies.
In presenting the resolutions adopted by the Bar upon the death of Col. C. E. Stuart, to the Corporation Court, yesterday, Mr. F. L.
Smith said:

During the last few years, your Honor, Death, the great messenger, has been no stranger here.
With his icy touch he has laid low some of the brightest ornaments of our fraternity, and in rapid succession we have seen the grave close over professional friends. That this is not our resting place is a lesson ever sounding in our ears. Of all the lawyers who composed the Alexandria Bar when I became a member, in 1840, and who have since pursued the profession, I look around in vain to see a living representative to examine. All gone, your Honor, to "that better world where no traveler returns." And now the sad duty, of late so familiar, again summons us to speak of the virtues and talents of another departed brother. Possessed of marked ability, and culture, a manly independence of character, and unusual devotion to his profession, his absence from our ranks will be felt not only as a personal and witty companion, but in his formal disposition as an advocate, and in his successful practice as an adviser. We mourn his loss, and tender our heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved family. Few, I believe, your Honor, in the outside world, appreciate the labors and the anxieties of a lawyer's life. To meet and overcome their requirements of patience and devotion to principle that we can command.
Bound together, then, as we men of the law are, by this common knowledge, and in the midst of these recurring evidences of the shortness and uncertainty of human life, may we not well learn a lesson of natural forbearance towards each other, and not forget in the heat of argument or the rivalry of interest that the time will soon come when our legal warfare will be ended, and only the gentler memory of our virtues shall rest upon us. I close my duty, your Honor, by asking, in the name of the Alexandria Bar, that these resolutions may be spread on the minutes of the court.

Mr. J. M. Johnson, Commonwealth's Attorney, said:

May it please your Honor: After the beautiful and eloquent words that we have heard, I feel little inclined to speak; but as I had determined so, I will not allow the occasion to pass without paying my poor tribute to the memory of our deceased friend and brother. May I have the honor to say, your Honor, that when I compared with the majority of the members of our Bar, was of short duration; yet it may be that I discovered a trait of character worthy of imitation which escaped the notice of many of them who knew him better and longer than I did. It was, your Honor, his friendship for the young, and his willingness to be a mentor to the young members of the profession. On the subject I can speak accurately, because more than once I experienced his kindness in this respect. I will mention only one instance.
Soon after my admission to the Bar I was assigned to defend a man, who was indicted for murder. I received the responsibility of such a case, and when I learned all the facts of it, which made it probable that he would be hung, for it was a cruel and unprovoked murder, my anxiety was great. In an oppressed frame of mind I went to Col. Stuart for help and advice.
I told him the case, and he was indignant for me and became much interested in it, and gave me advice cheerfully and willingly. I might notice other times, but this will suffice for my purpose. To me he was always kind and courteous; our relations were most cordial and friendly. I think I had his friendship, and he gave me the unmistakable evidence of it. For his kindness to me I was grateful in his life time, and for it will cherish his memory now he is dead. Col. Stuart possessed of fine talents, and was a faithful counsel. But it is not necessary to speak of his ability and skill as a lawyer in this courtroom and in the hearing of the audience. His success in prosecutions while Commonwealth's Attorney and defenses since, won for him the reputation of being one of the ablest criminal lawyers in the State. The reports of our Court of Appeals show that he never went to that court, in a criminal case, but he was successful. There was a fascination about Colonel Stuart that made for him a large number of warm friends. They will miss him and feel his loss sadly; but we will miss him and feel his loss more than any of his friends, because he was one of us, our brother, professionally, and he was closer and nearer to us; we saw him and heard him daily, and when he was called one of our household received the message. He has gone forever. How forcibly I realized it as I stood beside his open coffin and gazed on his features, cold and calm in death, and I thought then who will come next? for we must all follow him ere long. We were all traveling together along the same road; he was a little in advance and has reached the end of the journey a little while before us. I cannot forget his words on the occasion of the meeting of the Bar to take action on the death of the late lamented Taylor, when he said, his frame and voice combined with emotion: "It admonishes me that I have only a little while to stay. I feel that I shall be the next to follow him." Although not the next, your Honor, yet so soon that his prediction has been substantially verified. He has made his exit from the stage of human life, and we, his fellow actors, can do nothing for him now, at the most, but pause and draw a tear at the fresh earth of his new made grave.

Judge Love said that this custom of honoring the memory of departed brothers could never be followed with more propriety than in this case.
Col. Stuart had all the high qualities of head and heart which adorn the profession; a distinguishing legal mind, a clear discernment of justice and a knowledge of human nature rarely seen. This made him a dangerous adversary.
In private intercourse he was most pleasant and happy. Such a man could not live without the warm estimation of friends, nor can such a man die and be forgotten. Among my fondest memorial recollections I shall always hold his memory. The resolutions will be entered up on the record.

Very feeling and appropriate remarks were also made by Capt. D. L. Swoot and Col. M.
D. Ball.

A GOOD SPIRIT.—The Washington Capital, in its "Chronicles of Congress," says: "In the bill for the relief of one Williamson of Fairfax county, Virginia, who had acted as a guide and scout of the United States army. This little straw shows a good spirit, for Mr. Hunton was a general in the Confederacy, and this scout probably led the band of literary troops who laid violent hands on Mr. Hunton's law library and sent it to Washington, where it was sold at auction."

SUPERINTENDENT OF THE ALEXANDRIA AND WASHINGTON RAILROAD.—Mr. E. L. DuBarry, superintendent of the Baltimore and Potomac and Alexandria and Fredericksburg railroads the past few years, will leave in a few days for a new field of labor. He will be placed in charge of the new Fredericksburg and Pen-sylvania railroad. His successor is Mr. George C.
Wilkins.
